

Graduate Students Trained Under Welding Research Council Grants

The Welding Research Council, established by the Engineering Foundation under the sponsorship of the major Engineering Societies, provides a mechanism for carrying on cooperative research in welding and closely allied fields. The activities of the Council include the administration of large projects by specific Committees as well as sponsorship of small grants-in-aid by the University Research Committee to foster interest in welding research in additional Universities. In this way some three million dollars worth of research is actually reported and cleared through the publications of the Council and made available to Industry, Government Agencies and University Research Workers.

As a direct result of the Council's research activities, there is a steady flow of university-trained research men whose practical sense and imagination have been stimulated by participation in the Council's program.

The Council disseminates the results of its own research work and that of many other affiliated organizations through its five regular publications, namely: Welding Research, Reports of Progress, Welding Research Abroad, Welding Research News, and Bulletins. All of these publications represent some three million dollars worth of research annually and are made available to Subscribers and research workers.

A survey is made annually of all the graduate students supported wholly, or in part, by the Council while working for their Master's or Doctor's degree. This survey is brought up to date each year and at the present time it shows that 384 graduate students have worked on WRC projects since 1936 through June 1969. Of these, 124 received their Ph.D. degree, with the remainder receiving their M.S. degree.

This survey also indicated that 83 of these graduate students upon graduation had entered the teaching profession in our leading universities. Approximately 13 are employed by Government Agencies. The remainder, the largest number of those helped by the Council, are associated with Industry.

This information helps to emphasize the fact that the research projects of the Council expose a significant number of more highly trained scientists and engineers to welding problems. Thus, they in turn upon graduation are in a better position to work at a higher level in industry, or to impress upon their students at the universities some of the important aspects of welding problems facing industry.

At a recent meeting of the University Research Committee of the Council, a suggestion was made that this list of graduate students helped by WRC be published in the Welding Journal, with the suggestion that readers help to bring the list up to date by reporting any errors they notice in the places of employment of the graduate students. The list follows below. It would be greatly appreciated if readers having additional information on place of employment would please contact: K.H. Koopman, Director; Welding Research Council; 345 East 47th Street; New York, N.Y. 10017.
